

Rutgers University – Camden: Part-time Transfer Student Retention Summary

This report on first to third term retention for part-time fall transfer students contains data on 1,451 individual Rutgers–Camden part-time fall undergraduate transfer students who attended Rutgers–Camden part-time their first semester during the ten-year period between fall 2003 and fall 2012. A student is considered “retained” if they returned the subsequent fall semester and “not retained” if they did not return the following fall semester.

More likely to be retained at Rutgers–Camden

- Students whose parents have at least a Bachelor’s degree
- Students who have an Associate degree
- Students from the NJ02 EPS Market (see page 2)
- Students who file a FAFSA
- Students with Work Study in their first year

Less likely to be retained at Rutgers–Camden

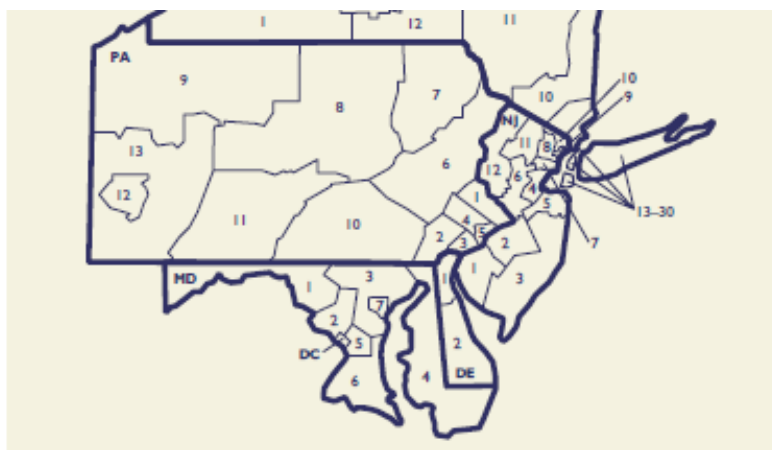

- Students without an Associate degree
- Students from out-of-state EPS Markets
- Students who do not file a FAFSA
- Students without Work Study in their first year

Non-Significant Comparisons

- Gender, Ethnicity, Age, Residency, Miles to Campus, On/Off-Campus Program, Admissions Major Category, Declared/Undeclared Admissions Major, EFC Band, Need Band, Pell Grant in the first year, tutoring in the first year

Note: All statistical comparisons are based on chi-square tests of significance between groups (e.g. students who file FAFSA versus students who do not file) and do not take into account other factors that can affect outcomes.
